

MORNING APPEAL

SATURDAY.....AUGUST 3

GOOD BUT INEXPEDIENT.

Mrs. Maybrick, accused of the murder of her husband, is already on trial in Liverpool, though the Grand Jury indicted her but a day or two ago. Her trial will be brief, and should she be convicted she will be hanged in two or three weeks.

This is one of the few instances in which the English manage affairs better than the Americans.

A person is arrested in England for, say, murder. In a month or two, at most, his case is presented to a grand jury, which sits simultaneously with the court of assize. The grand jury hears only the testimony for the prosecution, and, if a prima facie case be made out, at once sends a true bill into court and the trial begins as soon as that on any preceding bill shall have come to a conclusion. The trial is brief and to the point, and when the jury brings in a verdict of guilty, the Judge puts on a black cap and there and then sentences the prisoner to be hanged, giving him usually about two weeks for preparation. Between the condemned and the gallows there intervenes only the clemency of the Queen, or rather the judgment of the Secretary for Home Affairs, who interferes only in extraordinary cases. From the time of condemnation the prisoner is virtually dead. His execution takes place in a jail yard, early some morning, in the presence of a few officials and reporters only and with no ceremony or sensation, and his body is buried in quick-time by the authorities, also without ceremony, and that is the end of him.

It is throughout a very speedy, businesslike and dispassionate disposal of a person who has been guilty of a crime for the commission of which society has decreed extirpation; and the chief factor in the case has about as much chance to pose as a hero or make a sensation as has a sheep in a Butchertown slaughter pen.

We consider the system better than our own; although we do not say that it ought to be substituted for ours, because under ours, the lawyers can make more money, and our system of laws is arranged generally, so as to enable lawyers to make money.—S. F. Report.

JUDICIALLY DEAD.

Benjamin F. Chapman is in a bad fix. Seven years ago he married in this city. A short time thereafter he went to Tahiti on business. His sojourn was prolonged until a few days ago. He became so wrapped up in his business or in some Tahiti maiden, that his lovely San Jose bride was quite forgotten. For three or four years she didn't hear from him, and then his death in Tahiti was reported in the papers. Then she gave her heart and hand to another, and is now Mrs. Chase and a resident of New York. Now Chapman also wants to get married a second time but the records of this county show that he is dead—judicially dead, at least. He is a husband in the eyes of the law, too, yet his wife is legally wedded to another. He is in a bad fix, and there doesn't seem to be anything for him to do but to accept the fiction that he is dead, assume another name and administer on his own estate. This may not be the strictly legal way out of the dilemma, but it seems to be the easiest and common sense one. On the whole, here is all the material needful for a pretty novel. It wouldn't take much of an imagination to fill in the skeleton.—S. F. Post.

Adley Hook Cummings, formerly private secretary of A. N. Towne, died Wednesday morning at the residence of William J. Dingee, near Fridmont, Cal. The cause of his death was heart disease, and it is surmised that the shock of earthquake precipitated his death.

General Mahone says the Virginia Republican factions have buried the hatchet so deep that the handle is sticking out in China.

Early in the Summer the MORNING APPEAL predicted another earthquake shock, basing its predictions on the seismic disturbances in the Southern Pacific, and telling the people of San Francisco to look out. Last Wednesday morning the shock came. It begins to look as if the APPEAL theory relative to the falling of masses of the earth's undercrust into the molten matter was correct.

Next in interest to the question as to who will be Speaker of the House is the question who will be the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. These posts it is entirely safe to predict, will be held by Messrs. Reed and McKinley respectively, but which will hold which is the matter that is in doubt.

A veteran locomotive engineer named Wm. Bradley, while running between Fruitvale and San Leandro last Friday, ran into what appeared to be a small cloud, sweeping close to the ground, but what was in reality a swarm of bees. The cab was filled with bees for a few minutes, but neither he nor his fireman were stung.
